

WILSON AND AIDES SPLIT ON CURRENCY

President, Almost Alone, to Fight for Reform at Once.
Discord in Cabinet.

not to go sufficiently far to meet the views of Secretary Bryan.

There appears to be no open rupture, but lack of agreement in Administration circles.

Aside from the difference said to center in the vicinity of the White House, the President has not been unduly sensitive to sentiment in the Senate and House.

More than one Democratic leader has come to the White House to tell the President that there is no demand on Capitol Hill at this time for action. The President declines to be "pulled off."

Republican Senators who have suggested through indirect channels that they will aid in making the currency bill a non-artisan measure, if the President desires legislation now, have not yet been called into consultation.

Fears Bank Nomination.
That Mr. Bryan's name was today drawn into the story was not unexpected when one compares the prospective McAdoo-Glass bill with the speeches of the Comptroller. Mr. Bryan, it is understood, believes that there is danger of bank domination, even with a Federal board of control to supervise currency issues. His idea always has been a currency system disassociated from bank influence.

A speech he delivered in 1896 represents views somewhat at variance with those prevailing, according to all reports, in the currency reform bill. Friends of the Secretary of State say he has stood for thirty years on this theory regarding currency and banking; viz:

"They say that we are opposing national bank currency; it is true. If you will read what Thomas Benton said you will find that he said that, in searching history he could find but one parallel to Andrew Jackson; that was Cicerone, who destroyed the conspiracy of Catalina and saved Rome. Benton said that Cicerone only did for Rome what Jackson did for us when he destroyed the bank conspiracy and saved America."

Right to Issue Money.
"We say in our platform that we believe that the right to coin and issue money is a function of government. We believe it. We believe that it is a part of sovereignty, and can no more with safety be delegated to private individuals than we could afford to delegate to private individuals the power to make penal statutes or levy taxes. Mr. Jefferson, who was once regarded as good Democratic authority, seems to have differed in opinion from the gentleman who has addressed us on the part of the minority. Those who are opposed to this proposition tell us that the issue of paper money is a function of the bank, and that the Government ought to go out of the banking business. I stand with Jefferson rather than with them, and tell them, as he did, that the issue on money is a function of government, and that the banks ought to go out of the governing business."

It is not contended that the views of Mr. Bryan are fraught with possibilities of a split in the Cabinet. The discussion is more likely to come at the Capitol proper, where legislators are in no mood now to get together on currency. Mr. Bryan's ideas are merely set forth by his friends to show that there is wide diversity of opinion in the party on an issue which is loaded with trouble.

Here is the situation at the House, where the currency bill will first see the light:

Committee Is Divided.
The Banking and Currency Committee is about evenly divided on the issue of asset currency, which means a re-counting of commercial paper for note issues.

The Banking and Currency Committee was approved by President Wilson before it was made public. It is his committee as well as a House committee, and he could have brought about changes in the personnel, had he desired.

The fact that the names of members of this committee were submitted to the President before the committee was formally created, indicates a disposition on the part of House leaders to shift to the shoulders of the President full accountability for the bill which is reported.

Sever al members of that committee, however, have not been called into consultation regarding the Administration bill. Chairman Glass has done all the "conferring," and certain members of the committee privately complain that they have been overlooked.

Henry Plan Considered.
Congressman Henry's demand for a reopening of the money trust will be carried to the caucus if necessary. Friends of the Texas, who is likewise opposed to an asset currency, assert that he is a fighter and that he will have generous support when he urges "a slow" policy in currency reform.

Mr. Henry, however, does not desire to be put in the attitude of fighting the President. It is a difference of opinion regarding policy.

Contention of Henry.
The contention of Mr. Henry is that no currency bill is complete unless it takes into account the recommendations of the Pujo committee for the regulation of the "money trust" and the concentration of wealth and credit.

There is unqualified opposition at the House to a caucus which will bind the party to a currency bill. Members close to Speaker Clark, Congressman Underwood, and other leaders of the lower body, say they will not attempt to force party solidarity if the Administration bill is in any way unacceptable to the rank and file.

With the exception of Chairman Glass, of the Banking and Currency Committee, it is now asserted that no House leader wants to enact a currency bill now. It will overload the hoped-for victory on the tariff, and may result in a divided party.

A Democratic member gloomily predicted today that the currency bill will precipitate the biggest fight in the party since Cleveland insisted upon taking the silver issue in the early nineties. Cleveland's party became so split over the money question that it made a failure of the tariff.

The Democracy of today is united on the tariff, but faces a serious split over currency.

While House members are not united on the Henry proposal to re-open the Money Trust probe, there are in the Senate a few who are in the same state of mind. Aldrich-Vreeland emergency currency law has another year to go and that it will suffice for present needs.

Attitude in Congress.
During the discussion on the Aldrich-Vreeland bill several years ago Democrats both in the House and Senate were almost solidly against asset currency. An asset currency bill fathered by a Democratic Banking and Currency Committee would bring even greater disturbance now.

Mr. Henry does not contend that there should be a long-winded probe by special committee into the Money trust, but that the Banking and Currency Committee can resume the inquiry while it works on a currency measure, and give aid by possessing victorial powers over national banks.

The situation on currency today may be summed up as follows:
President Wilson thinks now is the time to have currency legislation. The Senate seems to wait.

There is no disruption in the party now existing; but it may come. It depends upon whether subsequent events prove the President or the legislative branch to be right.

Chance For Wilson.
If the President can put through both a tariff measure and a currency bill at one extra session, and they work out well for the common good, there'll be "nothing to it but Wilson."

If the party splits, as it did twenty years ago, whatever good effect may be gained by the tariff will be overshadowed by a row on money.

At present, President Wilson thinks he is right and is going ahead. Congress will make a stab at putting through the bill; but if House and Senate members don't think it's the right kind of a bill no special rule for its passage will be granted in the House and it may be talked to death in the Senate during this session.

Pre-emptory action measure will squeeze through the House, but will not go through the Senate before the regular session. In any event full responsibility for action will be put up to the President and he is expected to be willing to assume it.

SERMON HEARD BY M. A. C. GRADUATES

Baccalaureate at College Park Opens Exercises Which Close on Wednesday.

Commencement week at the Maryland Agricultural College at College Park began today with the baccalaureate sermon by the Rev. D. H. Stephens, D. D., of Baltimore, and until degrees are awarded Wednesday practically every hour of the day and evening will be filled with some student activity.

Tomorrow a tennis tournament will be held. A drill and battalion parade and class day exercises are other features of the program.

Tuesday the annual competitive company drill will be held. Other events are a ball game between the college nine and a team composed of alumni and faculty members. President and Mrs. Patterson give their annual reception on Tuesday, also.

Dr. P. P. Claxton, United States Commissioner of Education, gives the commencement day address on Wednesday. Twenty graduates will receive the bachelor's degree, and nine certificates of graduation from the two-year course will be bestowed. The master of science degree will be conferred on four alumni of the Maryland Agricultural College.

Large Sum Awarded District in Civil Bill
Signature of the sundry civil bill by the President, which is expected soon, will admit of expenditures of large sums in public improvements in the District.

Among the items in the bill is a provision allowing $2,523,972 for acquisition of the land between the Capitol and the Union Station.

Other District items include: $200,000 for work on the Lincoln memorial; $100,000 to begin the new building for Columbia Hospital for Women, $100,000 for completion of Bureau of Engraving building, $75,000 for equipment; $265,102 for completion of Washington post-office, $255,000.

For the new National Museum, $412,500.

Oxnard's Examination Will Be Continued
The Senate Lobby Committee will continue tomorrow morning the examination of Henry T. Oxnard, the beet-sugar millionaire, who, for twenty-three years has been working in Washington and elsewhere in behalf of the sugar industry. In recent years, Mr. Oxnard has been the guardian of the beet sugar interests in Washington and is a familiar figure about the Capitol.

Mr. Oxnard was before the committee a short time Saturday and gave figures of expenditures that startled the committee. He admitted he had spent $10,000 a year for twenty-three years, which would be $230,000 and also admitted that it might be twice that, or more than a half million.

Mr. Oxnard insisted the expenditures always were legitimate, but the committee will probe deeply into them.

Camorristi's Prosecutor Gets Special Promotion
ROME, June 15.—Captain Fabbri, who was instrumental in securing the conviction of the Camorristi at Viterbo, has been promoted to the rank of major for special merit, over the heads of all the senior captains in the service.

"NO NEED FOR NEW CANAL"—GOETHALS

Head of Panama Work Says
Wilson Has Chosen Best
Time to See Great Work.

President Wilson has chosen the best part of the year to make a Panama trip, said Colonel Goethals, head of the canal work today. He will find the Canal Zone a thoroughly delightful place with a cooling breeze continually. Moreover, he will have a hearty welcome.

Colonel Goethals is here to attend on Tuesday a meeting of the Panama railroad board. He will give advice on the work now in hand, and then return to Panama.

Of the canal, he says that it is a gigantic undertaking, which must be seen to be appreciated. He expects to remain there for many months yet to finish the work of the actual canal building, and the construction of docks and coaling stations.

In reply to a question as to the need of a second canal across Nicaragua, as permitted in the new Nicaraguan treaty, the colonel today declared that there is no need of such a canal now, either from a commercial or a war standpoint. The Panama canal, he believes, will meet all requirements for years to come, but he commends the policy of being prepared for future growth or emergency.

Colonel Goethals pictured the Canal Zone as a good place to live, since it has been cleaned. The temperature is even, and ranges from 76 to 89 degrees continually.

May is the worst month, because the humidity is particularly high, but August and September, with good breezes, are delightful months. While President Wilson's trip to the canal is dependent upon the adjournment of Congress, it is likely to be in one of these two months.

Trade Boomers Enjoy
Old-Time Ball Game
At the Board of Trade's membership committee outing at Great Falls yesterday the members enjoyed all the games and sports after the style of their boyhood days.

The baseball game was not one of the nine-men-to-a-team affairs. It was a regular old-time game of "one eyed cat," where everybody was either batter or catcher or pitcher, and nobody was troubled with an oversupply of bases and outfielders. Afterward everyone went swimming.

Among those who went on the outing were: H. Clifford Banks, chairman; Dr. George W. Brace, Gus A. Schultz, Arthur D. Joll, Fred J. White, P. D. Cone, E. R. Brooks, L. Lee Combs, Stacy H. Bryant, Walter L. Elliot, F. E. Cunningham, Richard L. Conner, Walter M. Brown, Lyman E. Burdine, Louis R. Peak, F. H. Ridge, John M. Berry, W. H. Cooper, Clarence Dodge, Michael A. Weller, William K. Ellis, George Pitt, George C. Schaffer, Frank E. Giblin, C. J. Gockeler, Odell S. Smith, William Claiborn, John R. Ergood, and Benjamin R. Coles.

Seven Hundred Veterans Will Go From District
Five hundred Union veterans, all members of the G. A. R., and 200 United Confederate Veterans, will represent the District at the Gettysburg encampment July 1 to 4.

Arrangements are now under way to accommodate these on special trains over the Pennsylvania or Baltimore and Ohio. Expenses will be paid by individuals as the Congressional appropriation plan failed.

President Wilson is scheduled to lay the cornerstone of the peace memorial July 4, the last day of the jubilee.

NAVY YARD WAGES ROUSE DEMOCRATS

Laboring Men on One Side and Employers on Other Keep Them in Hot Water.

Democrats in Congress are disturbed over the question of navy yard wages, raised by Secretary of the Navy Daniels.

They are pondering over the way to meet the problem. If they set a high minimum wage scale, as a result of the Secretary's investigation, they feel that they will have to answer business men's complaints; if they set a low minimum they must answer the laboring men's protests.

In the last session the question of navy yard wages was avoided by referring the problem to a board of naval officers. This board recommended some increase in Washington because the cost of living is higher here than in Philadelphia or New York.

Many people at the Capitol feel that it would be unwise to establish navy yard wages by law, at least, to the extent of fixing a minimum wage. Great pressure is being brought to bear on the Navy Department to turn all repairs and construction work to the navy yards instead of the private plants.

Mrs. J. had some old stored it away in the garret.

But Mrs. J., somehow or other,

She wished it out loud one day, and Mary, the cook—who cooked for Mrs.

you Put It In The Times?"

Mrs. J. did. And the next day Mary
